

VAKKARU
MALDIVES

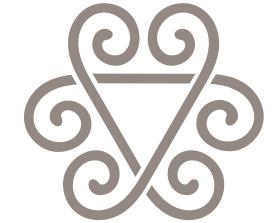

Baa Atoll

A Timeless Sanctuary

Within the UNESCO Biosphere Reserve of Baa Atoll in the Republic of the Maldives lies an untouched jewel, a reef island with powder soft, brilliant white sands, deep blue holes and a house reef with unique marine biodiversity. The exceptional beauty and awe-inspiring location were the reasons behind Vakkaru's quest to fashion an idyllic, sustainable environment of pared-back luxury amidst the endless emeralds and azures of The Maldives.

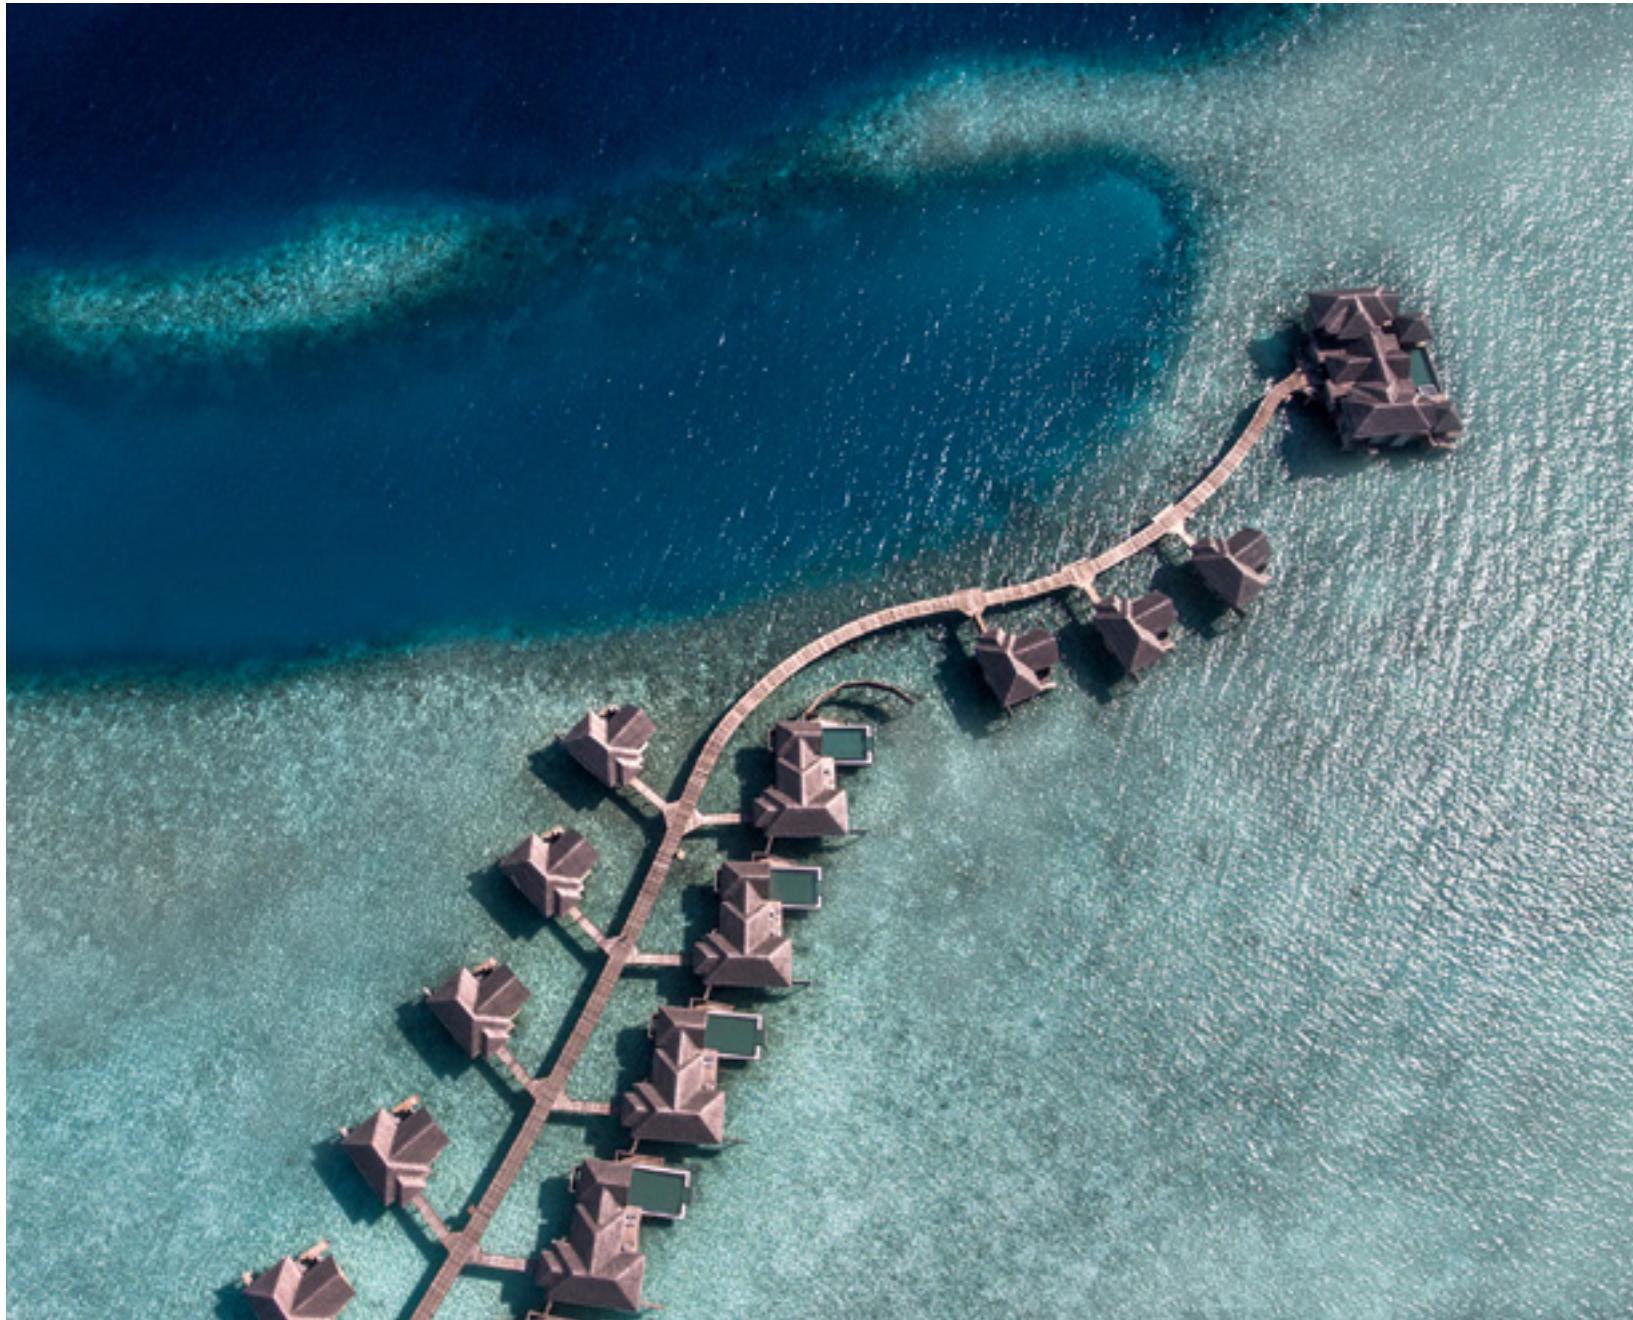

VAKKARU
MALDIVES

Vakkaru is a reef island composed entirely of sediment produced on the surrounding coral “faru” (or reefs), 85% it is thought, by parrotfish, the fish grinding up coral during feeding and, after digesting the edible content, excrete the rest as sand, creating the powder soft, brilliant white sands that encircle the island. The word Vakkaru means coconut timber in Dhivehi, truly depicts the island as a home to over 2,300 fully grown coconut trees.

Access

Vakkaru Maldives is a scenic 25 minutes north of Male International Airport by seaplane, or a 15 minutes domestic flight to Dharavaandhoo Domestic Airport and 20 minutes speedboat transfer.
